Month in Cash: About that elephant in the room

August 1, 2014

Before we discuss what's happening—and more accurately, what isn't—on the rate front, let's get the elephant in the room out of the way. As most if not all of you know by now, the Securities and Exchange Commission has adopted new rules for money-market funds, the most notable of which will require net asset values (NAVs) to fluctuate on institutional prime and institutional municipal money-market funds—Treasury, government and retail funds are exempt. First, it's important to understand this change won't take effect for two years. But we do expect our industry to begin to react sooner than that with new options and products for clients.

Might the SEC-mandated changes impact money-market rates? Potentially. Let's say some institutions opt to move into products other than money funds, such as bank CDs. That could have the effect of lowering money fund demand. Maybe the economy continues to improve, driving up the use of corporate finance and commercial paper. That could have the effect of boosting the supply of potential money-fund portfolio securities. Together, less demand/more supply could conspire to push up money-fund security yields. But if that were to happen, the higher yields very well could lure back investors who left the market, raising demand again and driving down yields.

In other words, supply-and-demand factors and market dynamics will determine what ultimately happens. But again, it's a two-year implementation time for the floating NAV on a limited set of funds, and we don't think rates are going to start to rise for fundamental reasons until the 2015 time frame, so all of this is down-the-road conjecture. That said, another big plus from our point of view was the SEC's decision to retain the $1 per-share NAV using amortized-cost pricing for Treasury, government and retail funds. The beauty of this highly mechanized accounting method is it effectively allows for instantaneous pricing on transactions—a client can send us a request to redeem a portion of their funds at 10:30 in the morning and can have their money by 11.

As for the current money-market environment, there was little movement along the cash-yield curve over the past month—rates remained stubbornly low, save for a slight steepening on the longer end of the curve that corresponds both to the end of quantitative easing and the initial moves up in the target funds rate.

Definition of Weighted Average Maturity (1) & (2)

(1)"WAM Days" is the mean average of the periods of time remaining until the securities held in TexPool (a) are scheduled to be repaid, (b) would be repaid upon a demand by TexPool, or (c) are scheduled to have their interest rate readjusted to reflect current market rates. Securities with adjustable rates payable upon demand are treated as maturing on the earlier of the two dates set forth in (b) and (c) if their scheduled maturity is 397 days or less; and the later of the two dates set forth in (b) and (c) if their scheduled maturity is more than 397 days. The mean is weighted based on the percentage of the amortized cost of the portfolio invested in each period.*

(2)"WAM Days" is calculated in the same manner as the described in footnote 1, but is based solely on the periods of time remaining until the securities held in TexPool (a) are scheduled to be repaid or (b) would be repaid upon a demand by TexPool, without reference to when interest rates of securities within TexPool are scheduled to be readjusted.*

Definition of Average Monthly Yield (3)

(3)This current yield for TexPool Prime for each date may reflect a waiver of some portion or all of each of the management fees.*
