Month in Cash: Wanted—More Fed governors

June 1, 2014

Companies and hockey teams adapt well to being shorthanded, but when votes are involved or diverse viewpoints are needed, being even one person down can create problems. So it has been for some time now at the Federal Reserve (Fed) as the molasses pace of confirmation has left the central bank short-staffed for months. It still has three seats out of seven open on its board of governors, nearly a majority, and that's only the case because the Senate confirmed Stanley Fischer to the board the day that governor Jeremy Stein stepped down, Wednesday, May 28.

Considering that the governors of the board make up a majority of the twelve member crucial monetary policy-making Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) (the others being the presidents of some of the regional Fed banks), three open seats represents a significant shortage that has serious consequences from the standpoint of the U.S. economy, not to mention the world.

Even if new voices on the FOMC didn't alter a particular vote on policy which is still data driven, we at least would get more viewpoints in speeches, in published dissents and in the influential "dots" chart of rising interest rate projections. Certainly the last release of the chart had a major impact on the market in March. Eventually things calmed down and the market deemphasized it, but the dots matrix offered a window into what the entirety of the committee thought. The full complement of policymakers might have pushed it more bullish from the standpoint of rates rising sooner, which we felt was the case. Or it could have had the opposite effect, depending on who those three would have been. Until the rest of the confirmations happen, the dots chart potentially could be skewed. It is an angle that has potential bearing on the world economy.

And the absence of a vice chair after Yellen left that position to lead the Fed has put a vacancy in a key position. Presumably we will have Fischer, former governor of the Bank of Israel, announced as vice chair soon. He adds an element of cautiousness about rates staying too low for too long. Fisher has spoken out on concerns with the QE program, that being able to unwind and control inflation all at the same time after years of stimulation might be a difficult process. That's a different viewpoint. So the more voices on the FOMC, the better balanced the output will be.

In the meantime, there hasn't been much rate change in the marketplace. The London interbank offered rate (Libor) was completely unchanged and Treasury bills were around a basis point lower. We have not altered our weighted average maturity

Definition of Weighted Average Maturity (1) & (2)

*(1) "WAM Days" is the mean average of the periods of time remaining until the securities held in TexPool (a) are scheduled to be repaid, (b) would be repaid upon a demand by TexPool, or (c) are scheduled to have their interest rate readjusted to reflect current market rates. Securities with adjustable rates payable upon demand are treated as maturing on the earlier of the two dates set forth in (b) and (c) if their scheduled maturity is 397 days or less; and the later of the two dates set forth in (b) and (c) if their scheduled maturity is more than 397 days. The mean is weighted based on the percentage of the amortized cost of the portfolio invested in each period.

*(2) "WAM Days" is calculated in the same manner as the described in footnote 1, but is based solely on the periods of time remaining until the securities held in TexPool (a) are scheduled to be repaid or (b) would be repaid upon a demand by TexPool, without reference to when interest rates of securities within TexPool are scheduled to be readjusted.

Definition of Average Monthly Yield (3)

*(3) This current yield for TexPool Prime for each date may reflect a waiver of some portion or all of each of the management fees.
