Month in Cash: Another month, another rule change

October 1, 2014

A little over two months ago, cash management in this country was hindered by new rules that the Securities and Exchange Commission issued for institutional prime and institutional municipal money-market funds.

Last month, it was the Federal Reserve's turn.

Although we agree with its two-year implementation time period, we were disappointed by the SEC ruling, in particular its establishment of a floating net asset value (NAV) for shares of institutional prime and municipal money funds. Prior to the vote, we repeatedly noted the lack of evidence that this change would eliminate runs during periods of stress in the financial markets. In the end, the result was not what we wanted, but at least we knew what it was after months of speculation, and we have been exploring what new liquidity-management solutions we can offer clients.

But only a few months into that process, the Fed announced that it was changing one of its programs that has actually been helpful to us. Since September 2013, the New York Fed has run an overnight reverse repo program (ON RRP) for certain large counterparties, with Treasuries as collateral. Since early 2014 it had settled on offering five basis points daily to fund this facility. While not much, at least it provided a floor to money-market trading.

As the majority of the market mid-September was focused on tightening and tapering, we were also dealing with different news. The New York Fed announced that the entire ON RRP would be restricted to $300 billion nightly and that a five basis point floor would no longer be guaranteed—essentially destroying the program's main goal of helping money funds in this time of its extraordinary accommodative policy. The new process could hardly be more needlessly complicated. If the total amount of all the counterparties' bids is less than or equal to $300 billion, the Fed will grant five basis points to all, even if the bids are lower than that. But if the total bids amount to more than $300 billion, the desk will sell first to the counterparties with the lowest bids, even if they are for zero!

So far, we are optimistic about the program, as the $300 billion mark has not been breached since this announcement except for quarter-end, and its use seems to be declining. Our counterparts in the industry appear to be anticipating the limit and

Definition of Weighted Average Maturity (1) & (2)

*(1) "WAM Days" is the mean average of the periods of time remaining until the securities held in TexPool (a) are scheduled to be repaid, (b) would be repaid upon a demand by TexPool, or (c) are scheduled to have their interest rate readjusted to reflect current market rates. Securities with adjustable rates payable upon demand are treated as maturing on the earlier of the two dates set forth in (b) and (c) if their scheduled maturity is 397 days or less; and the later of the two dates set forth in (b) and (c) if their scheduled maturity is more than 397 days. The mean is weighted based on the percentage of the amortized cost of the portfolio invested in each period.

*(2) "WAM Days" is calculated in the same manner as the described in footnote 1, but is based solely on the periods of time remaining until the securities held in TexPool (a) are scheduled to be repaid or (b) would be repaid upon a demand by TexPool, without reference to when interest rates of securities within TexPool are scheduled to be readjusted.

Definition of Average Monthly Yield (3)

*(3) This current yield for TexPool Prime for each date may reflect a waiver of some portion or all of each of the management fees.
